Against idleness

Apology for Raimond Sebond

By various means we arrive at the same end

Case of Spurlina

Ceremony at the meeting of kings

Characteristic of some ambassadors

Consideration upon Cicero

Cowardice is the mother of cruelty

Custom of the island of Cea

Defence of Seneca and Plutarch

Hour of parleying is dangerous

How our mind stands in its own way

How the soul relieves its feelings on the wrong objects, when the real are wanting

How we cry and laugh for the same thing

It is folly to measure the true and the false by our own capacity

Observations on Julius Caesar's methods in war

Of a saying of Caesar

Of a want in our administration

Of a young monstrosity

Of age

Of ancient customs

Of anger

† Of books

† Of cannibals

Of Cato the younger

Of coaches

Of conscience

Of cripples

Of cruelty

Of custom, and that an established law is not lightly to be changed

Of Democritus and Heraclitus

Of different results of the same counsel

Of diversion

Of drunkenness

Of evil means employed to a good end

Of experience

Of fear

Of fleeing from pleasures at the price of life

Of freedom of conscience

† Of friendship

Of giving the lie

Of glory

Of husbanding one's will

† Of idleness

Of judging of another's death

† Of hars

Of moderation

Of names

Of not communicating one's honour

Of not malingering

Of pendants

Of physiognomy

Of prayers

Of preparation

Of presumption

Of prognostications

† Of quick or slow speech

Of repentance

Of rewarding honour

Of riding post

† Of sadness (same as: Of sorrow)

Of sleeping

Of smells

Of solitude

† Of steadfastness

Of sumptuary laws

Of the affection of fathers for their children

Of the arms of the Parthians

Of the art of conversing

Of the battle of Dreux

† Of the custom of wearing clothes (same as. On the use of apparel)

† Of the disadvantage of greatness

† Of the education of boys (same as.

† On the education of children)

Of the greatest men

Of the greatness of Rome

Of the inconsistency of our actions

Of the inequality that is amongst us

Of the parsimony of the ancients

Of the power of imagination

Of the punishment of cowardice

Of the resemblance of children to their fathers

Of the uncertainty of our judgment

Of the useful and the honest

Of the vanity of words

Of three good wives

Of three kinds of intercourse

Of thumbs

Of vain subtleties

Of valour

Of vanity

Of war-horses

On some lines of Virgil

One does not with impunity defend a place obstinately and against reason

One man's gain is another man's loss

Our feelings continue beyond this life

That difficulties increase our desires

That our enjoyments are never unmixed

That the taste of good and evil depends, for a good part, upon the idea we form of them

That to philosophize is to learn to die

† That we should not judge of our happiness till after death

That we should soberly meddle with judging the divine ordinances

There is a time for all things

Time enough for business to-morrow

To Madame de Grammont, comtesse de Guissen

Whether the governor of a place besieged should go out to parley

Fighters for freedom

Contents—Continued

English navy gets a start thanks to the Vikings

Europe's conqueror in the nineteenth century

Faint flickers of light in darkest Europe

Fight for freedom of religion enters its crucial phase

France follows America's example and throws off the yoke of monarchy

Freedom of the seas beyond a cannon shot from shore

Gateway liberties have been won; new freedoms to follow

Great astronomers promote liberty from within by helping to free men's minds

Great poet whose contributions to freedom were written in prose

Hero of liberty in three countries

How an almost unknown hero of liberty plays an important part in ending the slave trade

How democracy and the strength to defend it produces prosperity

How Europe was made safe from the Mohammedans

How the Christians massacred each other

How the mind threw off some of its shackles

How the popes became powerful enough to crown kings

How William the Conqueror established a perpetual robbery

Importance of asking questions

In a great campaign for liberty during the early Roman republic the people lose

James the second's "public monster number one"

Liberty from foreign domination comes to part of South America

Liberty is sometimes a by-product

Liberty must be defended by fighting! The Christian nations pay tribute to the pirates

Liberty must begin in the soul—to have it yourself you must grant it to others

Liberty's new battle front—America Mohammed's "One true God" raids caravans

Mongol conqueror whose realm is visited by an ace publicity man

Most unanswerable argument for liberty ever written

Nobles of England win a victory over a thoroughly bad king

Once more the lovers of liberty find that they must fight for it and Cromwell leads the fighters

Printing and discovery open up two new worlds

Real religious toleration appears

Roman imperialism at its best under a benevolent emperor

Should a man be willing to die for his country?

Slave who had Rome at his feet for two years

Slavery ends in the United States

Social contract

Struggle begins for woman's rights

Terrible monk who urged a pope to repent

Torch-bearers light the flames of furious revolution in France and the United States

Un-Christlike crusades

United States firmly establishes democratic principles

Very unconventional woman dramatizes woman's wrongs

Wise American colonizer solves a great colonial problem

Witchcraft in Massachusetts

Women at last win the ballot
